Business Issues in Family Law Matters

Business considerations arise in all areas of family law, and understanding how to advise clients in this sensitive and complex area is of utmost importance. Join co-chairs Marla S. Miller QC and Ken Proudman, as well as a distinguished panel of legal practitioners, accountants, and business valuers from across the province, in an exploration of business issues in family law.

Review matrimonial property issues relating to businesses, including necessary adjustments to the matrimonial property statement. Explore important new disclosure requirements arising from recent court decisions regarding corporate expenses and business adjustments under Schedule III of the Guidelines.

Review practice issues such as:

- Director liability and resignations,
- Deficient minute books, and
- Other aspects of corporate law with a direct effect on family law files.

Discover several different approaches to distributing or compensating for business interests and assets. Expand your ability to interpret and analyze accounting valuations and reports by learning about the different types, their methodology, and the inputs that might affect them. Gain valuable knowledge about different types of tax reorganizations.

Network with practitioners in family, business, and tax law, and increase your confidence in addressing corporate issues as they arise in family law files.
